HEALTH AND SAFETY AWARENESS FOR WORKERS (NATIONAL)

A worker can be defined as “a person who performs work or supplies services for monetary compensation.” This online course is designed to provide workers with a general introduction to workplace health and safety in all Canadian jurisdictions.

This training will inform workers of their role within the internal responsibility system, with a focus on worker rights and responsibilities. This course will also move beyond legislative requirements and speak to the importance of healthy and safe work habits.

Who should take this course?

This course is applicable to new and existing workers within Canadian workplaces.

Course Overview

Upon completion of this course, participants will:

- Be familiar with occupational health and safety legislation in Canada
- Know the responsibilities of workers
- Be familiar with the responsibilities of Employers and Supervisors and how these responsibilities support workers
- Understand the role of the worker within the Internal Responsibility System
- Be knowledgeable regarding the three rights of workers and how they are implemented in the workplace
- Be aware of the worker's role in hazard recognition and reporting
- Understand the value of workplace policies and procedures, training, posters and other preventative measures
