Hazardous Occurrence Investigations for Federal Workplaces

There was a time when work related injuries, and even deaths were considered a “cost” of doing business. However today, workplace accidents and incidents are considered both socially and morally unacceptable.

According to the Association of Workers' Compensation Boards of Canada, workplace accidents have been on the decline since the late 1980's. However, while lost time accidents have decreased, the number of work related deaths have increased to an average of 3 each day in Canada alone!

Training Solution – Online Hazardous Occurrence Investigations for Federal Workplaces Course

This online course has been designed to assist managers, supervisors, Workplace Committee members and Health and Safety Representatives to conduct effective investigations in the event of a workplace hazardous occurrence, in order to reduce the risk of repeat occurrences.

Hazardous Occurrence Investigations will also assist Federal employers and individuals to take appropriate steps to ensure that proper reporting obligations are met, in order to avoid any legal non-compliance.

Course Overview

Upon completing Hazardous Occurrence Investigations for Federal Workplaces, participants will understand:

- Types of accidents and incidents
- Reporting obligations, both internal and external
- The investigation process, including:
 - securing the scene
 - collecting data through investigation techniques and interviews
- Written reports and recommendations
