SABRINA'S LAW

Sabrina Shannon, a 13-year old girl, died while at school as a result of anaphylactic shock. It was determined that her illness was aggravated by eating french fries from her school cafeteria that were cross contaminated with a life-threatening allergen.

Sabrina's law requires all school boards in Ontario to establish and maintain an anaphylaxis policy and program that focuses on the following:

- Strategies to reduce risk
- A plan to communicate information regarding life-threatening allergens
- Individual plans for every anaphylactic student that is specific to their allergy
- Regular training for teachers and all employees of the Ontario school board.
